PERFORMANCE REVIEW

The information in this section has been provided to BHG by BHCM. Derived from data calculated by BHCM, based on total performance data for each period provided by the Fund's administrator, IFS and risk data provided by BHCM.

BH Global Limited – performance overview

The NAV per share of BHG's USD shares appreciated by 0.57% and the NAV per share of BHG's GBP shares appreciated by 0.38% in October 2019.

BHMF

FX drove returns with gains from GBP trading partially offset by losses from Asian and EM FX strategies. Interest rate trading generated small positive returns as gains from directional positioning in US rates were partially offset by losses from volatility strategies.

BHDG

The bulk of losses in October arose in rates (through long exposure to bonds and interest rates) and FX, where losses were driven by long exposure to USD and JPY against a basket of currencies. There were some additional losses in equity and commodities as small gains from long exposure precious metals were more than offset by losses in other markets.

BHGV

Risky assets had a strong month in October. Subsequently, volatilities came under pressure. FX volatility had a strong start to the month but as realised volatility failed to pick-up, implied volatilities dropped back to their recent lows. Equity volatility was relatively well supported as higher equity markets caused some structured products to knock-out. There is likely to be a significant amount of autocallable note knock-outs in Q4, but it remains to be seen how much of these will be reinvested. Interest rate volatility gave back some of the August and September gains but as realised volatility stayed elevated, the implied volatility decline was limited.

BHAL

Gains from directional and curve trading in US, European, GBP and emerging market interest rates were partially offset by losses in volatility trading strategies. FX trading also generated modest gains across developed and emerging market currencies.

BHAS

In October, BHAS realised most of its gains in directional USD interest rates trades, running a long exposure in the early part of the month, before reducing the directional risk allocation to trade more tactically, notably through option positions. Smaller gains were realised in FX where BHAS benefitted from Brexit developments that pushed GBP higher. Against these gains, BHAS incurred minor losses in European Asset Swap positions as well as in USD interest rates basis.

BHMB

Interest rate and FX trading strategies made losses overall while equity trading generated modest offsetting gains. Within interest rate trading, yield curve and directional trading of the dollar-block (USD/HKD/SGD) was profitable, while losses stemmed from directional, curve and relative value strategies in Japan, Korea and China. FX trading was negative overall with gains and losses across a wide range of currency pairs. Equity gains were generated from long positioning in Asian indices.

BHFG

Over the month gains were made from being long GBP via EURGBP puts and GBPUSD calls. GBP appreciated as a new deal was agreed between the UK government and the EU thereby reducing the risk of a hard Brexit. This was offset in part by losses on long USD rates positions.

Other***

The bulk of the gains arose in FX trading where a long exposure to GBP was the predominant driver. A part of the gains were offset by losses from directional trading of US rates. Trading in other areas had no meaningful impact.

MANAGER'S MARKET REVIEW AND OUTLOOK

The information in this section has been provided to BHG by BHCM.

US

Real GDP rose 2% at an annual rate in the third quarter and looks set to slow below trend in the current quarter. However, the labour market remains strong with the unemployment rate at 3.6%. Core Personal Consumption Expenditures price index inflation remains below 2% and has slowed in recent months alongside a continued slide in inflation expectations. At its October meeting, the Federal Reserve cut interest rates by 25 basis points for the third time in a row, concluding for now its "insurance" easing cycle.

UK

The UK is heading for its second General Election in just over two years after Parliament backed the government's request of an election on 12 December 2019. The intention of the upcoming vote is to break the political deadlock around Brexit, after Prime Minister Boris Johnson was forced to extend the exit date to 31 January 2020. Most commentators see a Conservative majority as the most likely outcome, while also acknowledging inaccurate predictions in recent elections and the potential for polls to move. Economic growth increased to 0.3% y/y in the third quarter, although this was below both market expectations and the Bank of England's forecast. The Bank left interest rates unchanged in November, but fears of downside risks led to two out of nine members voting for a rate decrease.

EMU

EMU Q3 GDP increased by 0.2% q/q, slightly firmer than expected, while the annual growth rate remained at 1.2%, the slowest since Q4 2013. The EMU Composite Purchasing Managers' Index provided mixed indications in October; it edged up but to a level below the Q3 average, potentially signalling the prospect of slower Q4 GDP growth. EMU flash Harmonised Index of Consumer Prices inflation dropped from 0.8% to 0.7% y/y in October, while Core inflation edged up to 1.1%, reflecting upwards pressure from its most volatile components, but underlying trends remain subdued. The October European Central Bank ("ECB") Introductory Statement featured some subtle, but not insignificant, changes telling of an increasingly dovish view of the economy, and President Draghi left the ECB advising new President Lagarde to "never give up". Going forward, a sliding economy and inflation could yet force the Council to ease again in 2020.

Japan

The Bank of Japan held monetary policy unchanged at its latest meeting. The Statement emphasised there being "no further increase in the possibility" of a loss in inflation momentum. Moreover, the tone seems to have switched from promoting an increase in inflation to 2%, to preventing a loss in momentum. This should be taken in the context of little actual inflation momentum. National prices excluding food and energy have risen only 0.3% over the twelve months ending in September. That is better than what was seen in 2017 and 2018 but no different than the 12-month rate at the start of this year. Adjusted for the effects of the consumption tax, the 12-month rate in Tokyo prices has actually moderated this year to 0.4% in October.

Risk Factors

Acquiring shares in BHG may expose an investor to a significant risk of losing all of the amount invested. Any person who is in any doubt about investing in BHG (and therefore gaining exposure to BHMS and the investment funds in which BHMS invests (together with BHMS "the Underlying Funds")) should consult an authorised person specialising in advising on such investments. Any person acquiring shares in BHG must be able to bear the risks involved. These include the following:

- The Underlying Funds are speculative and involve substantial risk.
- The Underlying Funds will be leveraged and will engage in speculative investment practices that may increase the risk of investment loss. The Underlying Funds may invest in illiquid securities.
- Past results of each Underlying Fund's investment manager(s) are not necessarily indicative of future performance of that Underlying Fund, and that Underlying Fund's performance may be volatile.
- An investor could lose all or a substantial amount of his or her investment.
- An investment manager may have total investment and trading authority over an Underlying Fund and each Underlying Fund is dependent upon the services of its investment manager(s).
- Investments in the Underlying Funds are subject to restrictions on withdrawal or redemption and should be considered illiquid.
- The investment managers' incentive compensation, fees and expenses may offset an Underlying Fund's trading and investment profits.
- No Underlying Fund is required to provide periodic pricing or valuation information to investors with respect to individual investments.
- The Underlying Funds are not subject to the same regulatory requirements as mutual funds.
- A portion of the trades executed for the Underlying Funds may take place on foreign markets.
- The Underlying Funds are subject to conflicts of interest.
- Each Underlying Fund is dependent on the services of certain key personnel, and, were certain or all of them to become unavailable, an Underlying Fund may prematurely terminate.
- Each Underlying Fund's managers will receive performance-based compensation. Such compensation may give such managers an incentive to make riskier investments than they otherwise would.
- An Underlying Fund may make investments in securities of issuers in emerging markets. Investment in emerging markets involve particular risks, such as less strict market regulation, increased likelihood of severe inflation, unstable currencies, war, expropriation of property, limitations on foreign investments, increased market volatility, less favourable or unstable tax provisions, illiquid markets and social and political upheaval.

The above summary risk factors do not purport to be a complete description of the relevant risks of an investment in shares in BHG or the Underlying Funds and therefore reference should be made to publicly available documents and information.
