PERFORMANCE REVIEW

The information in this section has been provided to BHG by BHCM. Derived from data calculated by BHCM, based on total performance data for each period provided by the Fund's administrator, IFS and risk data provided by BHCM.

BH Global Limited – performance overview

The NAV per share of BHG's USD shares depreciated by 2.33%* and the NAV per share of BHG's GBP shares depreciated by 2.41%* in September 2020.

BHMF

Losses in September were driven mostly by commodity and FX trading with additional smaller losses generated in interest rates, equity and credit. The correction lower in precious metals resulted in losses for the fund's long positions. The recovery of the USD vs G10 currencies drove the bulk of the FX losses partially offset by long positions in Asian currencies. Tactical directional and relative value trading of European government bonds led to losses in interest rate trading partially offset by gains from short gamma trading of US interest rates. Small equity losses came from a tactical short bias.

BHDG

BHDG made losses in FX, equities and commodities with a small gain in rates. In FX, short USD positioning overall produced losses against a variety of pairs. In equities, long positioning in most indices translated to losses mainly in the US via Nasdaq100 and SP500. In commodities, losses were incurred mainly from long exposure to precious metals and energy. In rates small gains overall, with gains in EUR and GBP rates offset by losses in USD and JPY rates.

BHGV

Volatilities moved higher in the first half of the month as equity markets had a correction after a long run higher. Towards the end of the month, equity markets recovered and volatilities slid lower, ending the month flat to touch lower. Short dated equity volatility, especially in the US, remains very high. Risk premium for the US presidential elections is fairly elevated in all markets. Risk level was increased in equity and FX volatility.

BHAL

Tactical directional trading of FX, European interest rates, precious metals, and equity indices generated modest losses over the month, while volatility, relative value and inflation strategies and tactical trading in US interest rate markets generated some smaller offsetting gains.

BHAS

Main losses were attributed to FX trading through optionalised shorts in USD against different currency pairs. In interest rates space, losses were realised in GBP inflation trades as well as USD and EUR positioning. Additionally, some slight negative performance was shared between equity and commodity positions.

BHMB

Gains were predominately derived from FX rate trading. Positions in CNY, TWD as well as other non-Japan Asian currencies drove returns. Received positions across a range of interest rate markets including SGD, HKD, AUD and CNY also contributed over the month, while equity index trading in China, Korea and the US detracted slightly.

BHFG

Precious metals experienced a correction over the month of September which resulted in losses to long positions. There was a small loss from CMS curve cap positions as the USD rates curve flattened. Gains were offset from short USD positions vs Asian currencies and also from tactical equity hedges.

Other

Losses were made in all asset classes but mainly in FX then in equities. In FX, losses were made against most currency pairs vs short USD, some small gains were made being long Asian currencies. In equities, losses were made from long exposure to European stocks. In commodities, long exposure to precious metals, silver/gold and long energy-crude oil generated losses that were somewhat offset by profits being long agricultural products. In rates, a loss was produced with losses mainly in EUR Asset swaps. Long exposure to select credits in emerging markets generated a small loss for credit.

MANAGER'S MARKET REVIEW AND OUTLOOK

The information in this section has been provided to BHG by BHCM.

US

The pace of improvement in the labour market slowed in September, sowing some doubt about the dynamism of the recovery going into a tricky period in the fall when fiscal stimulus begins to fade. In Washington, fiscal talks broke down, leaving the market to wonder whether a deal can be put together before the presidential election. Investors apparently took comfort from the odds of a Democratic sweep ushering in a large fiscal expansion at the start of a Biden administration. At the Fed, policy makers provided guidance about their commitment to "lower for longer" to ensure a hot labour market and moderate overshooting of their 2% inflation objective.

UK

Over the past month, the UK and EU have made some progress towards a future deal, despite escalating rhetoric that followed the UK government's introduction of the Internal Market Bill. The main obstacles remain state aid, fisheries and the implementation of the Northern Ireland Protocol; a meeting between Prime Minister Johnson and President von der Leyen resulted in both sides agreeing to intensify talks. Hard data such as IP suggests that the UK economy is continuing to recover the output lost in Q2, however September's PMI surveys declined once more indicating a renewed decline in momentum. The unemployment rate ticked up only modestly, from 3.9% to 4.1%, as the labour market remained shielded by government support schemes. Meanwhile coronavirus cases continue to rise prompting local lockdowns and broader national measures that place further restrictions on economic activity.

EMU

The EMU Composite PMI fell by a further 1.5pts to 50.4, disappointing the consensus forecast and consistent with renewed slowdown after the May-July rebound. The renewed increase of coronavirus cases in the EMU to above their April highs is already affecting the economy, and a further decline in the Composite PMI in October seems likely. The EMU September Flash HICP was also an important release, pointing to EMU consumer price dynamics on a disinflationary, if not deflationary, path. Core inflation falling to a new record-low of just 0.2% y/y in September is yet another nail in the coffin of the ECB's far-too high inflation projections. Underlying inflation dynamics going in the wrong direction (and not just due to the temporary German VAT cut) should strengthen the hand of the dovish camp within the ECB Governing Council.

Japan

CPI inflation in Japan has weakened with core and western core national inflation falling into negative territory. The 12-month change in western core prices is now at its lowest rate since 2013. A strengthening yen and a central bank out of energy suggests prospects for 2% inflation are farther away. GDP has fallen for three straight quarters, but monthly data point to a significant, though incomplete, rebound in Q3.

- An Underlying Fund may make investments in securities of issuers in emerging markets. Investment in emerging markets involve particular risks, such as less strict market regulation, increased likelihood of severe inflation, unstable currencies, war, expropriation of property, limitations on foreign investments, increased market volatility, less favourable or unstable tax provisions, illiquid markets and social and political upheaval.
