

At Banfield Pet Hospital, the nation's largest general veterinary practice, helping pets and the people who love them is more than just a job — we're here to give back and to deliver on our purpose: A BETTER WORLD FOR PETS.

In 2017, we grew as a company and as a corporate citizen. We provided much-needed veterinary care and supplies, as well as volunteer services, to animal welfare organizations, communities, people and pets in need. We invested in our associates and continued to use our resources, reach and relationships to strengthen the broader veterinary profession. This year, our passion for helping pets and people earned Banfield a spot among Points of Light's Civic 50, which honors America's 50 leading community-minded organizations.

HERE FOR PETS

In everything we do, our goal is to improve the opportunities pets have to live happy lives in loving homes. When 2017 brought devastating hurricanes to Texas, Florida and Puerto Rico, and wildfires to California, we knew we had to do everything possible to help the pets impacted. We made a difference when and where it was needed most by providing supplies and medication to enable a veterinary response, awarding Banfield Foundation grants to organizations poised to help, and giving our time by volunteering.

Our greatest resource is the dedicated associates who provide quality care in our hospitals every day. Many of these associates also look for opportunities to extend that same level of care to the communities where they live and work. Through the Mars Volunteer Program (MVP), associates have opportunities throughout the year to volunteer their skills in animal care, veterinary medicine, and just plain hard work to meet the needs of vulnerable pets and help nonprofits in need.

HERE FOR OUR PEOPLE AND OUR PROFESSION

We have a unique opportunity to leverage our size and scale to both support our associates and advance veterinary medicine — whether through partnering on industry-wide initiatives, connecting our associates with their peers, sharing cutting-edge research, advocating for fair public policy, or supporting one another following natural disasters with the Banfield Better Together Fund (BBTF). Together, we do our part to strengthen the veterinary profession, because a stronger profession means healthy pets.
